Thumbs Up for the Priceless Parenting Class!

Chris Lewis, “Dad of Divas”, reviewed the online Priceless Parenting class and encourages all parents to check out the class to become even better parents.

Kenmore, WA, September 15, 2008 – Priceless Parenting was honored to be approached by Chris Lewis, creator of the Dad of Divas blog, to review the Priceless Parenting class. Lewis has two young daughters and works as Assistant Dean for Student Services at the University of Wisconsin – Manitowoc.

Kathy Slattengren, founder of Priceless Parenting, commented “When children reach preschool age, parents need to develop new parenting skills to deal with the increased challenges. Having our parenting class reviewed by Chris was a perfect opportunity to share valuable feedback from a preschool parent’s perspective.”

Lewis and his wife went through the lessons and started using the new techniques right away. Here are a few quotes from the review:

- "The lessons are narrated by Kathy and use down to earth, real life examples which truly makes the training that much more pertinent."
- "I already find myself using the knowledge from this course with my eldest (Diva-J). One of the biggest things that I have been trying lately from the training is the idea of choices and providing choices for Diva-J to allow her the freedom to make mistakes and offer learning moments."
- "I whole-heartily encourage all of you to check out Priceless Parenting to become an even better parent!"
- "This training is inexpensive in terms of what you get and in terms of what else is out there on the market for parenting courses. For 3 months access to the site you pay only $65, and Kathy will even let you register on her site for access to the first lesson to try things out."
